REFLECTIONS FROM MEDIA

Sugar Prices Are Too High in Zambia

Times of Zambia, August 30, 2014

Research findings by the Consumers Unity & Trust Society (CUTS) Lusaka show that the prices of sugar in Zambia are higher than expected and do not reflect the high productivity in the sector.

The result confirms findings of other studies by other organisations, including the market regulators, which show that sugar prices are relatively higher than expected.

Unveiling the report to the local media in Lusaka, CUTS International Lusaka Board Chairperson, Mike Muleba, said that the prices of sugar in Zambia do not reflect the cost advantages and high levels of productivity in the market.

CCPC Links High Sugar Prices to Lack of Competition

The Post Zambia, September 03, 2014

Sugar producers in Zambia are taking advantage of consumers to overprice their commodity, said the Competition and Consumer Protection Commission (CCPC).

CUTS Lusaka said that the government’s goal of combating vitamin A deficiency in the country through sugar fortification will not be achieved if sugar prices remain too high.

Speaking at a discussion held in Lusaka on sugar fortification and the controversy surrounding pricing, the CCPC said that the producers were taking advantage of consumers to overprice their commodity due to lack of competition.

Short Licencing Process Good for Business

Daily Mail, July 31, 2014

The business licencing reform programme (BLRP), which is aimed at shortening the process of licensing will promote growth in the transport sector, a senior Government official has said. The Ministry of Transport, Works, Supply and Communication permanent Secretary Charles Sipanje said that the reforms, which are being undertaken under the Private Sector Development Reform Programme (PSDRP), will encourage more players in the transport sector.

CUTS Lusaka was contracted to do research in the country’s licencing procedure in the transport sector. The project will be implemented over a period of seven months with support from the German technical organisation, GIZ.

CUTS Warns Women over Counterfeit Beauty Products

The Post, 21.09.14

Rising desire by most Zambian women to enhance their beauty is increasingly making them vulnerable targets for counterfeit products, a consumer watchdog said. CUTS Lusaka, advised that it was important that women become cautious of the products they consume. “Women ought to be careful; there are a number of fake female dominated or consumed products on the market produced by those with ill-intentions”, CUTS Lusaka Co-ordinator Simon Ng’ona said.
