Three years into the project, stakeholders in all the five countries are engaging policymakers through advocacy campaigns — at both national and regional levels.

Capacity Building Workshop on Dairy Safety

Food safety has become a major concern in Kenya with rampant media reports on cases of vended food contaminated with dangerous and fatal substances. Increasing awareness and capacity among farmers, processors, retailers, and consumers is a critical step towards providing safer food in Kenya. CUTS in partnership with Kenya Dairy Board (KDB) organised a combined training on milk quality and safety for Milk ATM and Milk bar attendants. The participants received a robust and wholesome training covering KDB’s mandate, dairy regulations, consumer safety, public health rules and enforcement.

‘Marginal Effective Tax Rates and Tax Incentives in Zambia’ Study Launched

CUTS Lusaka, Zambia released a report on the ‘Sector-Level Marginal Effective Tax Rates (METRs) and Investment Incentives in Zambia’ on August 17, 2018. The METR measures the returns of a marginal investment that is required to compensate for the effects of taxation. The higher the tax rate, the lower is the incentive to invest. The METR takes into consideration the various costs and benefits that influence the decision to invest an extra unit of capital into a specific sector. Some of the cost factors considered include economic depreciation; the costs associated with different types of financing and the effects of inflation and interest rates on investments.

REFLECTIONS FROM MEDIA

E-voucher the Right Policy to Support Agricultural Growth in Zambia – Stakeholders

The agriculture sector is under threat from reversing the roll out of the e-voucher card system, stakeholders have said. A joint statement by National Union of Small Scale Farmers, players in the fertiliser industry, agro dealers across the country, CUTS Lusaka the Centre for Trade Policy and Development, and the Civil Society for Poverty Reduction stated that reversing the positive decision to roll out the e-voucher card system even partially was not good for the country. The stakeholders stated that they believed the identified challenges such as late activations, late start as well as connectivity could be worked upon for timely and efficient delivery of inputs through the e-voucher card system in the 2018/2019 growing season.

CUTS Highlights Need for Healthy Diets

CUTS Lusaka, Zambia Centre Coordinator Chenai Mukumba mentions Zambia is among the countries struggling with alarming levels of malnutrition because of mono-diets. In an interview on the side-lines of a Civil Society for Poverty Reduction (CSPR) organised workshop dubbed, ‘Sustainable Diets for All’, Mukumba observed that Zambians had to start dealing with the challenge of malnutrition because most households had been relying on the same type of food for a long time. Mukumba said there was need for Zambians to diversify their diets in order to create a healthy nation.

Safety, the Overlooked Link in Food Security

Fundamentally, food and nutritional security is inextricably linked to food safety. According to the Food and Agriculture Organisation of the United Nations (FAO), food security is only achieved when people have access to, among others, safe and nutritious food that is necessary for a healthy life. The quantity and quality are bedfellows. There is great benefit for both public and private sectors to invest more in food safety; consider the foregone socio-economic burden brought about by non-communicable diseases and foodborne diseases derived from, among others, microbes and toxins in food.

CUTS Urges Government to Reverse the 30 Ngwee Tax on Internet Calls

CUTS Lusaka has urged the Zambian Government to reconsider issuing the statutory instrument to introduce the 30 ngwee a day tariff on Internet phone calls and rather focus on ensuring improved service provision by the mobile phone operators. Reacting to the 30 ngwee tariff slapped on Internet calls by Cabinet, CUTS Lusaka said that the decision by consumers to move to Internet phone calls is rational consumer behaviour prompted by past actions of both the Government and the mobile phone companies themselves, adding that Zambians have been receiving expensive but low-quality traditional phone services from the mobile phone companies.

Low Funding, Climate, Slow Agro-Processing

A study on leveraging the buy Kenya, build Kenya strategy to promote sustainable agro-processing has concluded that the sector suffers a number of challenges in achieving its dream. Problems, such as infrastructural bottlenecks, climate change, inadequate financing, technological challenges, and limited access to distribution channels are key impediments to success of local agro-processing industries, the study by advocacy group CUTS Nairobi, Kenya has found. The agro-industrial sector plays a key role in creation of jobs and spurring manufacturing for the country, a key sector in the president’s big four agenda. “Climate change is also a concern, which may yet be overlooked as we rush towards industrialisation”, stated CUTS Nairobi Director Clement Onyango.

Empowering Consumers to Demand for Food Safety

Ideally, consumer safety should be a primary focus of any food production or supply system and should be designed with consumer participation for accountability. However, a lot of times this is not the case due to information asymmetry in the market, as one side is more informed than the other, with producers and processors being more informed on the status of the products than the consumers. The quality and safety of food is in many cases only recognised after consumption results in adverse effects. Food safety is increasingly being recognised as an important issue for sustainable food systems and markets.
